We are traders of environmental progress, at the forefront of global change away from the pollution and depletion of natural resources. We trade environmental commodities and connect the dots in the global decarbonization economy. Our work ensures that money flows into the hundreds and thousands of projects that make the world a greener place. We see through the complexity of the global regulatory environmental maze and help governments and corporations achieve their sustainability goals.

We are leading environmental commodity traders with our headquarters located in Amsterdam. We also operate from offices in Europe, America, and Asia-Pacific, consulting globally with clients in their own language. With its trading and Corporate Climate Solutions offering, STX ensures directly and indirectly that money goes to the hundreds and thousands of projects that make the world a greener place, while providing corporations with the certified proof points of their contributions to environmental progress. We're a team of 500+ professionals from 60+ nationalities, all commercially driven, entrepreneurial and ready to turn potential into progress. Not just for us, but for the world too. At STX, we're focused on so much more than making money. We're here to make money make a difference. Because for us, nothing's more important than being able to trade in environmental commodities and create the most effective decarbonization strategies for our clients. Join us and together we can change the world – one trade at a time. It's no wonder we can go further, faster together.

Team and role

Policy is a major driver of environmental markets and having a detailed understanding of the complex and unharmonised policy landscape provides a crucial trading edge. We incorporate policy insights directly into our trading strategies. This is a commercially exposed role with P&L generating impact and business development of the company. This role is to take ownership of the biomethane policy development in the EU for the company. The role also has a geographic focus, initially the Netherlands, UK, France and Northern EU, for policies covering all STX products. There will be ongoing close support from the rest of the policy team. You will work closely with the research and analytics team and with business development to provide insights from biomethane policy development in the EU.

Responsibilities

- As a part of the central policy team of STX group, work in close cooperation with the company's renewable gas and biofuels teams, particularly with trading and policy analysts;
- Monitor EU regulatory and other policy intelligence mostly at EU but also global and national level relevant for biomethane and biofuels trading; brief the renewable gas and biofuels team;
- Assess likelihoods of policy changes with impact on trading positions;
- Lead position papers drafting and other policy material in consultation with the policy team and the renewable gas and biofuels teams;
- Represent STX Group in dialogues with the EU institutions, industry coalitions and other stakeholders related to the designated policy areas;

Role Requirements

- Work experience in the field of EU biofuels or biomethane policy, ideally in Brussels or the Netherlands; energy trading experience a plus;
- Strong network of EU policymakers and European industry stakeholders;
- Master's degree;
- Proactive and accountable style of working in a fast-paced, cross-functional team environment with a demonstrated ability to take ownership of complex topics and to translate political language into commercial insights;
- Strong command of English, any other European language, especially French, would be a plus.
